ALLABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

S an agricultural laborer in Cornwall, William Bickford had to work from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. y day to make half a crown—about 50 cents. It wasn't enough to support his wife and six nen. Mr. Bickford had been a crane operator in a quarry, but the quarry closed. There seemed to be nothing left but farm work.

So Mr. Bickford scraped together the fare and came to Canada alone to strike a new trail for his-family.

So Mr. Bicklord scrapes together to came to Canada alone to strike a new trail for hisfamily.

He worked for Victoria city and as a mining contractor. Eight years later, his three oldest boys joined him. In 1921, 10 years after he had emigrated, his wife and the other children arrived. They hadn't seen one another for 10 years. They gathered money to buy some Saanich bush land, whittled it into a berry farm, and worked hard through meagre times until they wrung a good living from it.

This year Mr. and Mrs. Bickford, *80 and 79 respectively, sold their berry farm and retired to an apartment in Sidney. On Aug. 19 they will leave for England on their first return trip to their home village, St. Dominic, Cornwall.

With them will be three of their sons, three daughters-in-law, a daughter and two grandchildren—a party of 11 in all.

couver Island's west coast when three of his sons—George, then 20; Stan, 18½, and Arnold—came out to join him.

At $17 a day for six months, he made a little stake before the mine petered out. Then he returned to Victoria and went to work for the city. Meanwhile, Mrs. Bickford had also crossed the Atlantic.

"I wrote to him, 'We'm selling everything, and we'm coming out to you," says Mrs. Bickford. "If we'd waited for him to send for us, we might be waiting still. "You got to take the bull be the horns, wi' some on 'em."

She is a buxom, fresh-faced woman, remarkably vigorous and candid in speech.

They lived in a place on Balmoral. Mr. Bickford worked hard, helping build the northwest sewer and on other projects for the city, but his pay didn't do much more than pay the rent.

So they bought 18 acres of bush land in Saanich for $1,600. They said they couldn't afford to pay the whole price. The owner, a generous man, allowed them to pay half down and the rest later, a dubious transaction in those days of cash dealing.

Mr. Bickford got an old delivery truck, While he worked, his boys went out to the property and cleared brush, and he joined them in spare time.

They built a small house on the land and moved out there as soon as they could, minus light and water. They planted approximately an acre a year in strawberries and logans; bought extra acres until they had approximately 30.

Mr. Bickford didn't know much about land clearing at first. He tried to fell a big tree with an eight-foot bucking saw—one meant only for sawing logs on the ground.

It took him and one of the boys from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to get through the seven-foot trunk. He began to get worried about where the tree would fall. So he ordered Mrs. Bickford out of the house. She left her cake baking in the oven. They turned the pigs loose to get them out of the way.

The tree smashed down through the middle of the house. There were no casualties, except the cake, which went flat. It took hours to catch the pigs and many days to rebuild the house.

After some years, the Bickfords had one of the best berry farms in Saanich. Their sons all became berry farmers too. Not long ago, the berry production of the Bickfords was some 100 tons a year.

The main secret of their high production of good berries is constant care. It won't do to keep running about the country, the Bickfords declare. The secret is to cultivate and prune and pick at the proper times.

"If this patch wants doing, you've got to do that now, and do it proper," Mrs. Bickford says.

Another reason for their success is that they have never had a sickness to drain away their money. The elder Bickfords have never spent their money on gadgets. Mrs. Bickford Sr. has never owned a washing machine in her life, and doesn't own one now.

No Interference After All

THIS newspaper had some sharp words to say yesterday on the basis of what must be assumed to be the considered statement of Northern Affairs Minister Hamilton before the House of Commons in connection with Canadian jurisdiction in and around the DEW radar line in the Arctic. The minister said, and with admitted "chagrin," that Canadian officials including even cabinet ministers had to secure U.S. permission before travelling near this U.S.-manned joint defence area. That of course would be a serious infringement of Canadian sovereignty.

Mr. Hamilton's Commons statement was immediately denied by the U.S. state department, which said no U.S. clearance is required for Canadians in their own country and that no obstacles are put in the way of officials in the Canadian Arctic areas. Confronted with this Mr. Hamilton reversed himself and conceded the U.S. state department's point of view. Prime Minister Diefenbaker subsequently told he House of Commons that under present arrangements for travel in the Arctic no loss of Canadian sovereignty is involved.

It is difficult to reconcile Mr. Hamilton involved.

It is difficult to reconcile Mr. Hamilton's part in this affair. One day he says he is "ashamed" of the situation and the next day he dismisses it as "small and picayume." Such inconsistency in so important a matter, from the minister who should be best informed on Arctic conditions and requirements, is astonishing. It would appear for one thing that he put into the present tense something which if to be mentioned at all should have been put in the past tense.

Mr. Diefenbaker told the Commons that when he became prime minister there had been circumstances that seemed to infringe on Canadian sovereignty and his stand was that there should be cooperation at all times but no infringement. It seems probable there was some obstruction in the past which does not now exist. Under what are described as improved arrangements an agreement went into force last month which eased the situation and now facilitates travel in the DEW line areas.

This newspaper is glad to hear that, for it holds the view that joint northern defence measures are necessary and in the best interests of both Canada and the United States. It believes there is no need for undue friction between allies of this nature, and that the sovereignty of each should and can be easily and amicably maintained. Mr. Hamilton is not to be commended on his very misleading remarks, however, which in the manner of their presentation question his fitness for the portfolio he holds.

ONE had thought it was only the North American leg that was in danger of atrophy for lack of use, but apparently human limbs in Europe are suffering from the same complaint—the motor age. Thus the wry remark of a Swiss alpine guide that in their enthusiasm for motoring the young people of Europe "have forgotten how to walk."

In this instance, it could be added that they have forgotten how to climb, for it is the falling off in mountaineering that gives the guide concern. The guide business is in the doldrums. The type of customer who formerly spent his vacations attempting to conquer Alpine peak, under the careful eyes of licensed Swiss mountaineers, now goes dashing about Europe, in automobiles.

This is not to say that climbing ven-tures are being wholly by-passed. In lesser numbers a new mountaineering group has moved into the picture, but without much profit to the professional guides. Mountaineering in the Alps has become, relatively speaking, a poor man's sport, which means that while hundreds of climbers still tackle the Alps they do so without the aid of the guides. They do it on the cheap.

The inevitable result has followed. There are more fatal accidents, proportionally, than ever there were before. The pocket is protected but the hazard to life is increased by the inexperience of climbers who dispense with the hiring of guides. The guides in fact spend more time rescuing climbers than they do showing them the ropes, and to their compassion and skill while extricating neophytes from danger must be added the irony of being ignored in the first place.

There is a moral here applicable in place.

There is a moral here applicable in other pursuits where professional guidance is helpful even if it costs a little

Boatowners, Beware

ONTARIO'S Civic Holiday (an institution devised to give people a long weekend in August) was noteworthy this. year for the fact that for the first time on record the number of persons drowned while pleasure-bent exceeded the number of traffic fatalities. Most of those who lost their lives in the water were the victims of mishaps with small boats.

This experience in Eastern Canada, where the dangers certainly are no greater than in the waters around here, gives point to instructions issued by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that federal regulations with respect to safety equipment must be obeyed to the letter. In this connection British Columbia boatowners have had ample information as to what is required of them, and no one can plead ignorance. The RCMP's final warnings; in future failure to comply with the regulations will result in prosecution. In view of the numbers of small boats to be seen far from shore with scanty lifesaving aids or none at all, it looks as if punishment will be necessary to drive home the importance of the safety rules. On the mainland there have been several prosecutions already, accompanied by heavy fines in some instances.

And to get the answer, a beam of scientists, headed by Verner Suomi, University of Wisconsin meteorologist, is putting finishing touches to a Vanguard satellite which will become the sunshine. will become the sunshine sleuth. It will probably be launched late this year.

Sunshine means fremendous amounts of hear falling upon the earth every day.

Obviously the earth doesn't keep all this heat. If it did, we would all cook. The earth gets rid of as much heat as it collects.

"Suppose the oceans get more sunshine than usual. for lack of clouds. You would think there would be more evaporation and so more rain would have to fall somewhere. Or do the oceans perhaps store heat in such a way that short-term changes in incoming radiation don't make any real difference? We'd like to know."

To help resolve such questions, the sunshine satellite will measure three things: The heat coming to the earth from the sun; the heat reflected by clouds, snow and water, and the amount of heat radiated into space by the earth and its air.

These measurements can be sea, by day and by night. It will provide knowledge not obtainable in any other way.

Sunshine is the source of all our weather.

The tropics collect more heat than they surrender. The polar regions surrender more than they receive from the sun. Heat moves from the equator toward the poles to be dissipated. These great migrations are the basic mechanism of our weather.

The sunshine safelille carries four little sensors or metal balls suspended at the tips of long antennas. The sensors measure temperaures, which in turn depend upon the amount of radiation.

Attempts to Revive City Hockey League

Another attempt will be made this season to revive commercial hockey in Victoria.

Doug Fletcher, president of the Greater Victoria Minor Hockey Association, announced yesterday that plans are being made for a new four-team league to operate his winter. Plans will be finalized at a meeting within the next two weeks.

The army and navy will each enter a club, and the Greater Victoria Minor Hockey Association will sponsor a club made up of its junior players and some of its recent graduates. Fletcher indicated that there are more than enough players in the city for the fourth team, which still needs a sponsor.

America's Cup-$4,000,000 Sports Puzzle

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—As a sports event, the America's pensive single sports event and certainly the least profitand certainly the least profit able. This year the total cost of the four America boats competing for the right to defend against the British may well exceed $4,000,000.

defend against the British may well exceed $4,000,000, including such incidentals as renting a house in Newport for the summer for an aliman crew and their wives. But the backers get no return on their investment. Even mentioning money is considered gauche. No tickets are sold. There is no gate. There are no indirect dollar dividends.

If you're planning to come up to Newport to "see" the race Sept. 20, you'd better bring with you at least a 36-foot yacht (anything smaller will be uncomfortable in this own radar, a high power telescope, plenty of dramamine and a good hook.

From a spectator's view-point, this race is frequently as exciting as a room through the multiplication tables. It's the kind of race where you can go below for a long drink, smoke a cigar, complaining about the nouveau riche now in yachling come back on date.

For example, this is a race

For example, this is a race between 12-metre hoads. How long is 22 metres? The rules of the International Yacht Racing Union take no less than 45 pages to explain this. Somewhere, deep in 1 he tangled jurgle of explanation, this basic formula is cited. "L. length plus 2d /girth around the hull, plus the square root of s (sail area), minus f (freeboard), divided by 2.37."

by 2.37." Clear? Anyway, the four must have a stove, cooking utensits, cullery and a table but no one has to use them. Most of the time, the boys eat sandwiches. Each must carry 180 feet of

VIM, AMERICA'S CUP CONTENDER

. . . and Plenty of Dramamine

One rule has been clarified over the years. If a crew member falls overboard, he must be picked up. Each bost must finish with as many people as it started with. In the old days, during calms, many crew members used to turn out the side of the light calms.

Since the U.S. won the cup in 1851, the British have tried 16 times, the Canadians twice, to win it but the cup still remains at the exclusive New York Yacht Club.

Before the summer is over, the Weatherly. Easterner, Vim and Columbia will have raced each other about 40 times in the hope of being the American defender. But, no matter who wins and how often, the all-powerful selection committee, is not bound to pick the heat with the most victories for the September race.

About the cost. A single main sall for one of these 12-metre boats in the cup race costs about $5,000. The whole complement of sails costs about $25,000 for each

The designing, building and outfitting of each cost well over $100,000. Then you add incidentals: tender, crew, gas, maintenance frequently hauling out in a shipyard every time a pimple shows up on the bottom and care, feeding and housing of crew.

The cost to the syndicate backing each boat thus is expected to run close to $1,000,000 before the summer is over.

cents. In size that's 11 to 14 inches. Under most conditions catchable trout probably cost at least a dollar per pound, although this is being reduced by the new pelleted fish foods. California's figure is 93 cents. If one-half to two-thirds actually are caught, the final cost can be figured accordingly.

There is room in fish culture to apply a lot of good science. However, many an old-line hatchery is operated by men with little training. This means the program is well adapted to the needs of political regimes where much of the help is turned over periodically.

It is adapted also because stocking can be done according to demand and as a means of buying favor in the right places. Arrival of the hatchery truck makes good publicity all the politician must say to gain his kind of credit is that "we replenished our fishing waters with umpteen million fish." The people draw their own conclusions.

Actually, stocking is a valuable tool of management, but the need and method must be spelled out by careful study of a particular problem. When the fishery biologist calls for hatchery fish, we can be sure he has a sound purpose in view. He isn't impressed by statistics.

Ever Watch a Forest Die?

No? Well, we have. It started several days ago. Seems like years. "Big fire over the watershed," they told us. "Everybody's needed."

So we've been fighting it for forty-eight hours. Sweating and choking in the smoke till our eyes and lungs feel burnt out.

The paper'll talk about a million-dollar loss. But when you read it you won't see the red hell that turned big trees into living torches. You won't hear the roar of it or know the black discouragement of falling back, defeated, time after time.

What do we think about, besides our aches and pains? Well, we remember a lucky deer that raced past . . . a bear and her two cubs that got away. And the scorched young trees that would have been forest some day. Then we think of the boys on the big yellow bulldozers, ramming through brush and trees and blinding smoke to cut the firebreak along the ridge. That's what finally licked it.

Last of all we think of you. Was it you who dropped the match? You, who tossed the cigarette out of the car window, or left the campfire smoldering? If it was, we wish you'd been here with us to see this

WEST COAST was

MA TRIEND Cherrill Betterfor and I wished to make a hike along the West Coast of the Island and from his father, the manager of the Graham Lumber Company, later the Cameron I umber Company, who owned two pairs of caulked loggers' boots, we borrowed the shoes and telt ready to like to Port Renfrew.

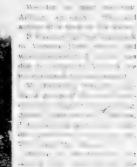

We caught the Sooke stage at Bray's livery stable on Johnson Street, and after the usual winding, climbing journey, jumped down off the stage at Sooks, adjusted our packs, and set out for Port Rentrew, where the Graham Limber Co ran a logging camp.

We walked up a long hill and stopped at a tarm on our right, at milking time. Here I think it was Mrs. Clark who kindly furnished us with a lard pad tilled with milk. Time to rough it later

THIRST-QUENCHERS

By GINNIE BEARDSLEY

Anxion wanting further information on the process of order making here described, should write directly to the author, at 'Foot of Harding Lane,

FINDING FALLT with other people's brew is practically the number one hobby of those who cultivate the yeasts and bend the elbow, so I shall expect loud outcries from all who think our cider is too weak, too strong, too dry, sweet, bubbly, or flat—the moment I break into print. However, with so many people bent on joining a certain mainland brewers y buch has lately got into the act, I think it's time to set down some experience we've gained in eight years of cider-making, for the benefit (or discourt terment) of those who consider following our

1,000 Sailors Said:

Thanks Very Much

By AVIS WALTON

In HMS Newcastle all hands were grateful.

"IN ALL MY YEARS of service I have never seen any port anywhere in the world give such generous and wonderful hospitainty to sailors of all ranks," said It Hugh Rump, RN. Secretary to Capt A. B. C. Gordon Lennov of HMS Newcastle. "People simply arrived down at the pity with their cars and said they would like to cutertain some of our crow. When I asked what rank they would prefer to entertain, 99 per cent of them said it was of no importance, they would take any men who were free for a few hours' shore leave."

Viva, Augustus!

THE MONTH OF AUGUST took its name from that of the Emperor Augustus (meaning "Majestic"), son of Ailia, the niece of Julius Caesar, first Emperor of Rome, born in 63 B C. Before that time, this month was known as Sextilis (the sixth month) and was re-named in honor of Augustus when he was admitted to the Senate, because he had been so successful in warfare at home and abroad, and had subdued the troublesome country

THE MASTER SPIES

The Story Has Been Told, But This is a New View

The SPY was RIGHT, BERLIN was WRONG

For most of his lifetime, Colonel White was with the British army intelligence. He did dangerous and fruitful work during the years of the second World War. Parachuting into France, on one assignment. he was severely injured, but the French underground gave him succour and he escaped the ravenous (estapo. When he left the army and went into the British Parliament, he worked hard-too hard, and his old wounds drove him to retirement. He is a prolific author. This is one of his stories:

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, Middle East, Field Marshal Sir I Henry Maitland Wilson, looked across his desk at the three officers sitting in front of it. Tapping a bulky, buff-colored file blazoned with the "Top Secret" diagonal red cross, he said:

"We may as were face of the train earlier of these patestrictions. The Han has give destinent linears on Areata William on that are the a rese to Andrews of the libert and and top second data is Wester and four tests

Cardinal's Story Gripping Reading

SINTEENTH CENTURY England, turbulent, passionate, violent changing, was a fitting stage for two of history's most magnificent, coloridand vigorous characters: King Henry VIII and Thomas Cardinal Wolsey.

There seldom has been either a rise or a fall as spectacular as that of Cardinal Wolsey, a man of the humblest origins who bent monarchs and lopes to his iron will and was finally destroyed by them at the height of his sumpluous power.

Police Chief Faced Murder Charge

TT was around 9 o'clock on the night of Nov. 4, 1875, that the "luck of the Irish" finally forsook a big, bearded Provincial policeman called John H. Sullivan.

At that moment he was clinging to a ship's grating a couple of miles off Cape Flattery.

Had it not been for the freshening winter gale there might have been a chance. Drenched by brenkers in the freezing blackness of the November night, finally his grip relaxed and death claimed him.

I said he might have had a chance; it would have been 150 to 1, for of the 300-odd passengers on the doomed steamer Pacific, only two were saved.
